

How To Make Folders Open In Separate Windows

Sunday, 29 November 2009

By default, each time a new folder is opened in XP it loads in the same window. From there, the navigation buttons would be used to move backward, forward and up. There is a way to make all folders open in separate windows. Using either one comes down to a matter of user preference.

Here are the instructions:

- Click 'Start'.
- Click 'Control Panel'.
- Double-click 'Folder Options'.
- Click the 'General' tab if it is not already selected.
- Under 'Browse folders' click the option that says 'Open each folder in its own window'.
- Click 'OK'.
